By degrees, however, new ideas began to creep in, and a young clergyman, thoroughly inbued with these, was called to the doctor's accistance.

the doctor regarded his young mentor for a moment in silence, and then said, with a genial smile: "Mr. Smith, when I first took up my residence in Haltmore, I lived way up town. Now I live way down town, and yet I have been living in exactly the same house all the time."

AMUSEMENTS.

The Grand.

The patrons of the popular Second South street theatre have a complete change this week in the way of a rural drama. It is a drama with a story-one dealing with an abducted child, a one dealing with an abducted chat, a wicked gypey, scheming relatives and the good fairy, with German and Irish comedians and an eccentric comediance has side issues. The "good fairy" is Si Perkins, played by Sam J. Burton, and the cornedy old maid is done by Lattic Coleman. These are the leading characters.

The story is one of melodramatic in-terest, and is of the kind which holds one's attention to the last. The com-pany has its own orchestra, which ren-

The Theatre.

The Theatre.

"The Wrong Mr. Wright" is a play which does full justice to the renaration of that excellent writer of farce-comedies, Mr. George H. Broadhurs. It deals with the story of an abscorder who has assuming the name of Wright, his former employer, who soes to track him—also assuming the name of Wright—a female detective, and several other characters who complicate matters at the proper moment and make things entertaining the rost of the time.

Mr. Reed is a most delightful comedian—one of the perfectly natural sort—a "couldn't-be-otherwise b!-he-tried" kind, and he is supported by a very excellent company. Miss Rush, besides showing herself to be a charming and gorgeously-dressed actress, proved her versatility by singing some coon ballads in excellent style.

Sait Lake's old Triend, Mr. Charles Wyngate, received a hearty recognition, and played his part of the English chapple eleverly—he made a big hit. Good work was also done by Mr. Charles Abbe Charles Lorinin, who is not new to Salt Lake, was accontable as the young lieutenant, although a trifle stilted and trugic.

Miss Luce was good as the main disguised as the mistress, as was also Lattic Cliter in the alternate role. The whole cast is one of unusual merit, and if the Roscafeld comedy tonight is as good as the Broadhurst comedy lastingbit, an enjoyable evening may be anticipated.
